Bank Women To Hear Talk On Their Role In Business

The Tidewater Virginia Group of the National Association of Bank Women will hear "What Management Expects of Its Woman Bank Officers" at a 6:30 p.m. dinner meeting Saturday at the Hotel Chamberlin.

They will be told by Frederick Deane, Jr. of Richmond, senior vice president of the Bank of Virginia.

Deane, a native of Boston, was educated at Milton, Mass., Academy and Harvard College. He received a master's degree in business administration from Harvard Business School in 1951.

Recalled to military service Deane, who had been in the Army from 1944 to 1947, was assigned to the Central Intelligence Agency. Upon his discharge in 1953, he became assistant to the president at the Bank of Virginia.

In his present position, the speaker supervises directly the investment and staff relations departments and is chairman of the senior management credit committee. He also is executive vice president of the Virginia Commonwealth Corp., recently formed bank holding company.

Deane is treasurer of the Richmond Travelers Aid Society and a member of the executive committees of the Richmond Area Association for Retarded Children, Richmond Society of Financial Analysts, Richmond Symphony, St. Catherine's School and St. Paul's College. He is a former vestryman and Sunday School superintendent at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.
